Preventing Internet Banking Fraud

Internet banking is a secure and efficient means of transacting online but you need to ensure you take adequate measures to protect yourself.

what can you do to protect yourself?

- Always type your financial institution's website address into your browser - never use a link to your financial institution that has been sent to you by email or that is on a website: these may lead to fraudulent websites.
- Confirm that your data is encrypted between your computer and the financial institution by looking for the https:// at the top of the screen in the address bar and the locked padlock symbol on the bottom right hand corner of the browser window. Click on the padlock and make sure it's current.

- Always log out from your Internet banking session when you have finished.
- Close your Internet browser after logging out at the end of each Internet banking session.
- Ensure that you are aware of the security advice provided by your financial institution.
- If any windows 'pop up' during an Internet banking session, be suspicious, especially if it directs you to another website which then requests your customer identification or password.
- Keep private information out of chat rooms e.g. passwords, credit card details.
- Don't send your financial information via email to anyone.
